In 1970, he returned to California and began a career in the master planned community business by joining The Irvine Company in Newport Beach, California. In 1972, he received a Masters degree in Planning and Public Policy from the University of California at Irvine. His career took him to San Diego and eventually brought him to Auburn to launch the Winchester Project in Meadow Vista. In 1997, he left that project and started a consulting company called Snyder Sierra.

As a third-generation California homebuilder, he has been a strong supporter of Habitat for Humanity. Working with the Foothills Habitat for Humanity program for the past five years has been a natural match for Snyder's talents, experience and energy.
